

THE RADIO ANNOUNCER IN FULL SLING

By Janine Bouyssounouse

Like a sniper, he lay waiting. When the front door opened, he pulled the trigger on the high powered sling shot.

The scissors flew threw the air and pinned the intruder to the door jamb by catching the edge of his jacket with the scissor tips stuck in the wood.

Will the sniper ever snip again?

Will the intruder break free from the high powered scissor pinning?

Stay tuned as our combatants duke it out on prime time TV.

THE RADIO ANNOUNCER IN FULL SLING Follow Up Questions

1. This story is a play on words. What word is the one that turns this into a comedy instead of intense drama?
2. What does the title mean?
3. Why does it mean to "duke it out"?
4. Where is this story intended to be read?

THE RADIO ANNOUNCER IN FULL SLING

Follow Up Questions And Answers

1. This story is a play on words. What word is the one that turns this into a comedy instead of intense drama? The sniper is a misspelling of sniper, so instead of a high powered rifle, he is using a high powered sling shot to propel the scissors, which are used to snip things.
2. What does the title mean? It is telling the reader this will be read by a radio announcer. It is also a play on words. The Radio Announcer in Full Swing is saying the radio announcer is really into what he is doing. The Radio Announcer in Full Sling refers to the high powered sling shot in the story.
3. Why does it mean to "duke it out"? It is a term that means people will be fighting hand to hand, as in a fist fight.
4. Where is this story intended to be read? It is intended to be read on the radio based on the title. It is supposed to be a teaser to announce the TV show.